Academic Regalia

The history of academic dress dates to medieval European universities of the fourteenth century. Universities originally used the same clerical robe and hood as the religious orders which established them. When universities achieved identity as educational institutions rather than extensions of religious orders, the design and the symbolism of their regalia began to change. Universities in Europe and areas culturally tied to Europe developed colorful gowns and caps and the hood became a designator of degrees earned instead of a piece of headgear.

Many American institutions have adopted caps and gowns incorporating their official colors. American University's distinctive red, white and blue regalia was introduced in 1988. All undergraduates wear the mortarboard cap with a silver tassel that is traditionally shifted from left to right at the end of the commencement ceremony. Undergraduate students who are projected to graduate with Latin honors and/or University honors wear gold hoods.

Graduate students wear a blue hood lined in red and white with velvet trim to signify their degree or academic field. All master of arts students wear a white-edged hood, except for those in education (light blue) and international service (peacock blue). Gold velvet trim denotes master of science degrees. Other degrees with specific hood trim colors include the Master of Business Administration (drab), Master of Fine Arts (brown) and Master of Public Administration (also peacock blue). Juris Doctor students wear hoods edged with purple, as do those receiving the Master of Laws, who also wear a tam cap in place of the mortarboard.

American University doctoral degree candidates wear the tam with a silver tassel and carry their degree hoods in the processional. They are then "hooded" by their faculty adviser during the commencement ceremony. Members of the faculty generally wear the regalia to which they are entitled by virtue of the degrees they hold. The regalia may denote their alma mater and the field of study in which the highest degree was earned.

Although some universities use different systems, the academic field is usually identified in accord with a standard code of colors used as part of the decoration of doctor's gowns or tassels on caps as well as hood trim. In addition to fields listed above, these include: economics (copper), journalism (crimson), library science (lemon yellow), music (pink), philosophy (dark blue), science (golden yellow) and theology (scarlet).

Honorary Degree Recipient

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi has gained international recognition for her courage in the struggle against oppression and her efforts to restore democracy to Burma, which has been under military rule since 1962.

Born in 1945 in Rangoon, Aung San Suu Kyi is the daughter of General Aung San, Burma's national hero who fought for independence from Great Britain and who was assassinated in 1947, six months before he was to become prime minister of newly independent Burma.

Educated at the Methodist English High School in Rangoon, Aung San Suu Kyi accompanied her mother Daw Khin Kyi, Burma's ambassador to India, to New Delhi, where she studied political science at Delhi University. In 1967 she earned a degree in politics, philosophy, and economics from Oxford University. After college she worked on the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions at the United Nations, and later married Dr. Michael Aris, a British Tibetologist now at Oxford University. They have two sons.

In 1988 Aung San Suu Kyi returned to Burma to care for her mother. When protests against the military government that year prompted a popular uprising for democracy in Burma, she joined the movement and became an effective public speaker and advocate. She was instrumental in establishing the National League for Democracy (NLD) and became the party's general secretary. The military government, renamed the State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC), placed Aung San Suu Kyi under house arrest in 1989, claiming she was "endangering the state." She remained in solitary confinement under house arrest for six years, until July 1995.

In 1990 the NLD won 82 percent of the seats contested in the first multi-party general elections held in Burma since 1960. SLORC nullified the elections, stating that a new constitution was needed before power could be transferred. Since then Aung San Suu Kyi and other pro-democracy activists have continued the struggle for freedom in the face of government persecution.

A Buddhist, Aung San Suu Kyi practices non-violent civil disobedience. Many of her efforts focus on uniting the divided regions and ethnic groups in Burma. She and her party favor a federal state in multi-ethnic Burma, with protections for minority cultures, languages and traditions. Recently she has called upon foreign governments and corporations to impose economic sanctions against Burma to effect democratic change.

Aung San Suu Kyi has been recognized by the international community for her personal courage and dedication to the principles of non-violence, democracy, and human rights. In 1991 she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Among numerous other awards, she has also received Norway's Thorolf Rafto Prize for Human Rights; the European Parliament's Sakharov Prize for Freedom of Thought; India's Jawarhalal Nehru Award; the 1995 Freedom Award from the International Rescue Committee; and the W. Averill Harriman Democracy Award from the National Democratic Institute.

The honorary degree from American University is the first to be awarded to Aung San Suu Kyi from a university in the United States. Because she is unable to leave Burma, it is being awarded in absentia and accepted on her behalf by her husband, Dr. Michael Aris.

Degree Candidates
December 20, 1996

The following students have applied to receive degrees as of fall 1996. The university awards degrees only after certifying that all degree requirements have been satisfied.

Graduation honors listed for individual students are projections based upon the cumulative grade point average at the conclusion of the summer 1996 semester. These designations are subject to verification at the time of final degree clearance.

Students who are projected to graduate with Latin honors and/or University honors wear gold hoods during the commencement ceremony.
